What's Going on in the LLC this Month?

IT'S ALIVE!

Mango, the new Library search engine, is now live.

For faculty, this will mean that some of your links to library content may need to be updated in Blackboard, your syllabus, and other instructional areas for them to continue functioning. Please see the below chart for what kind of links will and will not require updating.

Need to know how to update your links to library content? We made a video you can watch or you can check out written instructions here. Need a little face-to-face assistance? We’ve already got walk-in Mango help sessions scheduled in the South Campus Faculty Resource Center for August 28 (3-5 p.m.), August 29 (9-11 a.m.), and August 31 (9-10 a.m.) and will be adding more soon. Be sure to keep an eye on our Faculty Resource Guide for updated dates, times, and locations.

If you’re teaching summer classes, please don’t panic: Primo will continue to run in the background through the end of August, so you should not see any interruption of service on your existing links. However, your links will need to be updated to remain functional for Fall term.

What We're Reading This Month

Elisabeth at Downtown is reading:

After the success of The Fault in Our Stars, John Green returns with this equally compelling novel about teen illness, friendship, and love in Indianapolis. Aza Holmes is an intelligent sixteen-year-old struggling with an intrusive case of obsessive-compulsive disorder, among other anxieties. Through experiences with her friends Daisy and Davis, Aza ultimately gains some control over her illness and solves a mystery in the process. In fact, mystery (of the unsolvable sort) may be the ultimate theme of this book--hence, its memorable title based on a well known anecdote from Stephen Hawking’s A Brief History of Time. Why not check both titles out?

Abby at Kent is reading:

Both amusing and informative, Breasts: a natural and unnatural history opens the floor for a discussion of all things related to one of the most controversial features of female anatomy. Over the course of fourteen chapters including, "Plumbing: a Primer", "What's for Dinner", and "Are you Dense? The Aging Breast", readers will discover the history and development of human mammary glands, scientists' sometimes skewed opinions on the purpose of breasts, how our role in the environment is affecting breasts young and old, and what the future may hold for boobs everywhere.
