What's going on in the LLC this month?

February is for Series
This month we're part of something bigger - two somethings, actually. First, we're proud to partner with Student Life & Leadership to bring back the Last Lecture Series, featuring presentations from seven faculty members selected by students. (Learn more about the original series, launched in 1984, here.) Second, we're working with the Author Series to bring you a set of escape rooms designed to help students get to know more about Damon Tweedy and his book before he arrives for his speaking event in March. Click the images below to learn more about these events; click here to see the LLC's entire calendar of events.

What We're Reading This Month

This month's Professor Is In Book Club Title:

Frederick Douglass spent much of his life recounting his personal history on the abolitionist speaking circuit (including... a stop in Jacksonville in 1889), but his Narrative of 1845 marks his first attempt at the written autobiography he’d spend the next few decades expanding and reworking. This initial work is a brief and unflinching look at the years he spent enslaved as a boy and his desperate bid for freedom, and is a tauter read than many thrillers. Click here for details on our book club event on this title, or here for information on this month’s special Kent edition of our book club featuring Damon Tweedy’s Black Man in a White Coat.)

Jennifer at South is reading:

As slim and sharp as a razor blade, Friday Black flashes past you so quickly that it takes a minute to realize just how deeply it cuts. The twelve stories collected here are brutal, occasionally surreal re-imaginings of the brutal, occasionally surreal world we live in. There's a bit of science fiction or fantasy to most of them, but that's only the medium against which the author sharpens his social criticisms of race in America, not an end in itself. Buyer, beware; this Friday Black is nothing to undertake lightly. It's best paired with a stiff drink and a serious self-interrogation about what we can do to start stitching up our wounds.

New in the Archive This Month

Getting the Inside Story

Between 1988 and 1990, FSCJ's TV Production Studio created a five part series called Jacksonville: The Inside Story which introduced the history of the city, with special episodes on schools in Duval County and Consolidation. Check out the full series in the FSCJ Archive channel on our YouTube, or explore the rest of the Digital Archive.
