Just for Faculty and Staff

The Library and Learning Commons invites you to our second annual
FSCJ Author Reception
Join the Library and Learning Commons staff as a reception to honor FSCJ faculty and staff who've published books or articles over the last two years. Light refreshments will be served.
Friday, April 12, 3:30-4:30 P.M.
Advanced Technology Center, T140/T141
The reception will immediately follow the last session of the Academy for Teaching and Learning's Faculty Colloquium.

What We're Reading This Month
This month's Professor Is In Book Club Title:
They say fortune favors the bold, but is that the truth or simply a societal bias toward a particular personality style? Susan Cain discusses how throughout the 20th century we've come to place increasing importance on being outgoing, and what we might be missing when we ignore the power of quiet people. Through an examination of changing psychological perspectives and an overview of some of history's more surprising introverts, Cain makes a persuasive argument that it's not just the bold who get ahead. Elisabeth at Downtown is reading:
After the success of The Fault in Our Stars, John Green returns with an equally compelling novel about teen illness, friendship, and love in Indianapolis. Aza Holmes is an intelligent sixteen-year-old struggling with an intrusive case of obsessive-compulsive disorder. Through experiences with her friends Daisy and Davis, Aza ultimately gains some control over her illness and solves a mystery in the process. In fact, mystery (of the unsolvable sort) may be the ultimate theme of this book—hence, its memorable title, based on a well known anecdote from Stephen Hawking's A Brief History of Time. Why not check out both?
